Note—The claim is made by the compiler of this book that William Barney the first, Baltimore (about) 1695, ancestor of Commodore Joshua Barney, came probably from the original New England line and of Jacob, Salem, 1634. Much time and money have been expended in the research for the ancestors of William the first, Baltimore, and still the record is not complete. It is hoped that future research among the descendants of Commodore Joshua Barney may reveal the ancestral line wanted, and place beyond question the true ancestry of the illustrious Commodore Joshua Barney, United States Navy 1776–1812. Such honors as were his have been given to but few men in the history of our country.

JOSEPH NICHOLSON BARNEY

Capt. Joseph Nicholson Barney, son of John and Elizabeth (Hindman) Barney, was born in Baltimore, Md., August 25, 1818. Having an unusually fine mind, a remarkably good memory and a special gift for mathematics and languages, he received a good education; and at the early age of fourteen years, he was further advanced than many who were years older than himself. He entered the United States Navy in 1832, and remained until the breaking out of the Civil War, when in June, 1861, being on foreign service he resigned his commission as lieutenant and entered the Confederate Navy with the same rank. During the twenty-nine years in which he served in the United States Navy, he gave splendid service—visiting every port then known, sailing twice around the globe, and proving a splendid and able officer. In the Confederate Navy, the same fine qualities were brought into play, and he was promoted for gallant and meritorious conduct. After engaging in many hazardous undertakings, he was ordered to Europe to see to the fitting out of vessels being built in France for the Confederacy. But in 1863, his health failing, he was compelled to resign his commission and returned to this country. After the close of the war, he returned to private life on a farm in Powhatan County, Virginia, and in December, 1873, removed to Fredericksburg, Virginia, where he engaged in the insurance business till the time of his death, 1899.

JOHN PAUL JONES TABLET

“The only home in America of John Paul Jones” was marked appropriately November 25, 1911, when a bronze tablet was unveiled on the house at Fredericksburg, Va., where the famous American naval hero lived in 1775, when he was appointed a lieutenant in the Continental navy. The tablet was erected by Betty Washington Lewis chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was unveiled by little Miss Josephine Carter Barney, descendant of a long line of naval worthies.

THE JOHN PAUL JONES HOUSE
Fredericksburg, Virginia

Fredericksburg, Virginia

With simple and appropriate ceremonies the tablet to mark the home of John Paul Jones was unveiled November 25, 1911, under the auspices of the Betty Washington Lewis Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The tablet was unveiled by little Miss Josephine Carter Barney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. N. Barney, of Fredericksburg, Virginia. Her selection for this ceremony was peculiarly suitable to the occasion, one of her great-uncles having served on the Bon Homme Richard with Commodore John Paul Jones.

She is a descendant of a long line of distinguished naval heroes, whose brilliant services to the U. S. Government are matters of historical record.

Her grandfather was the late Capt. J. N. Barney, who served in the United States and Confederate Navies, taking part while on the Jamestown in the famous Hampton Roads fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac. For gallant and meritorious conduct he was promoted to commander by the Confederate Congress, and afterwards sent abroad to superintend the outfitting of vessels being built for the Confederate Navy in France.

Her great-grandfather, Commodore Thomas A. Dornin, appointed midshipman, 1815, from Maryland, gave years of distinguished service in the navy and saw more active service than any officer of his day.

Her great-great-grandfather, Commodore Joshua Barney, offered his services to the colonies and received an appointment on the sloop of war Hornet. For one of his gallant exploits the Legislature of Pennsylvania voted him a sword. Among a list of distinguished commodores, his name came first when read by the Governor of Maryland at the reinterment services for John Paul Jones at Annapolis.

One of her great-great uncles, Commodore James Nicholson, joined the American forces at the beginning of the Revolution and was first captain of the defence, afterwards in command of the Virginia, 1776, and the following year became commander-in-chief of the navy.

Her great-great uncle, Commodore Samuel Nicholson, born in Maryland 1743, was first commander of the frigate Constitution, was lieutenant with John Paul Jones on the Bon Homme Richard at the time of her engagement with the Serapis, and was the senior officer of the United States Navy at his death in 1811.

Another great-uncle, Charles Edmundson Thorburn, was one of the first graduates from the Naval Academy at Annapolis and served as midshipman under Commodore Perry during the Mexican War.

Later dates show members of the same family serving in both the U. S. and C. S. Navies.

Her first cousin, Franklin Porteous Holcomb, graduated from Annapolis in the first class, and not many months afterwards lost his life in that terrible accident in Hampton Roads, June, 1907, when a launch containing eleven men, sailors and officers, was sunk in some unknown manner and all on board were drowned.

Representing a family which has attained such honor in the United States Naval service, Miss Josephine Carter Barney was selected to unveil the tablet to the famous and renowned commander of the first American navy.

A Few Facts in Connection with the “BIOGRAPHICAL MEMOIR OF COMMODORE
JOSHUA BARNEY”

1759-1818.

A work written in 1832 by Mrs. Mary Barney, daughter-in-law of Commodore Joshua Barney, begins with statements relating to the ancestors of Commodore Barney and which have remained as records of history and facts for seventy-five years and more.

The parentage of Abraham Lincoln remained obscure for years till strenuous research brought to light the fact that his ancestry was of New England instead of the South, and the little town of Hingham, Massachusetts, is now known as the home of the first Lincoln family.

Commodore Joshua Barney—United States Navy 1776-1812—was illustrious and his ancestry should be known.

Mrs. Barney in her book states:

“William Barney, the grandfather, was sent from England by an uncle, at the early age of fourteen years, to the British Colonies of North America. Of his parents nothing certain is known; but it is presumed, from the circumstances of his being then under the control of an uncle, that they were both dead at the period of his leaving England: and, from the fact that he came recommended, by that uncle, to some of the most respectable inhabitants of the province of Maryland, it may be further inferred, that the family was of some consideration in the mother country. It is certain that he came to the New World much against his will. This event took place about 1695; and as, at that period, it seldom occurred that more than one ship from the mother country visited the colony during the year, the youthful adventurer had time to reconcile himself to the destiny forced upon him. By a course of industry and good conduct, he soon attained that degree of independence and general consideration in the community, which enabled him to form a respectable and advantageous connexion by marriage. The fruit of this marriage was one son, upon whom he bestowed his own name of William.

This son, of whose early life no legend or tradition has descended to us, formed a matrimonial alliance with an heiress of large property, by the name of Frances Holland Watts. From their union there sprung no less than fourteen children.

At the time of his marriage, and for several years afterwards, William Barney resided in the town of Baltimore, in that part of the County of Baltimore known by the name of Patapsco Neck. Here Mr. Barney continued to reside, happy in the enjoyment of all the blessings of domestic life, until the year 1772, when he had not attained his fifty-third year.

1759 Joshua Barney was one of the fourteen children of William and Frances Holland Barney. He was born on the 6th day of July, 1759, a year or two before the family was removed to Bare Creek—so that the city of Baltimore, which became afterwards his chosen residence, was also the place of his nativity.”

After much research and expense the following facts have been found:

A RECORD OF A BOND

William Barney

and

Henry Sater

to

Morgan Murray

15th of January, 1707

This is the first record found of William Barney and he is undoubtedly the first William Barney in the line of ancestors of Commodore Joshua Barney; but from what place he came is yet to be established.

Second, there is a deed or patent from the Lieutenant General and Chief Governor of the Province of Maryland, dated June 10, 1734, conveying to one William Barney, Baltimore, one hundred and fifty acres of land.

Third. Under date of March 19, 1746, there was probated the last will and testament of William Barney. The will mentions the following persons:

1. Eldest son William
2. Eldest daughter Martha
3. Son Absalom by my wife Mary

4. Son Benjamin by my wife Mary
5. Second son William by my wife Mary
6. Son Moses by my wife Mary
7. Daughter Mary by my wife Mary
8. Daughter Ruth by my wife Mary

The birth record of William, the eldest son, is as follows:

William, born March 20, 1718, son of William and Elizabeth Barney.

The last six are given in the will as "by my wife Mary."

The birth record of William² and the mention of wife Mary by William¹ in his will, would seem to establish beyond a doubt that this William¹ 1695 had (first) Elizabeth, (second) Mary.

As this will mentions eight children, and Mary Barney in the "Biographical Memoir of Commodore Joshua Barney" mentions only one son (William), she would seem to be in error.

It is hardly necessary to state that the father of William Barney who married Frances Holland Watts, naturally could have been none other than the first William Barney, 1695, referred to by Mrs. Mary Barney in her "Biographical Memoir of Commodore Joshua Barney."

NOTE.—Since this article was written and which appeared in a pamphlet issued in 1910, there has been found a deed which conveyed land as a gift by Mary Stevenson to her daughter Elizabeth, wife of William Barney. See copy of deed page 23.

Joshua Barney

In this same "Biographical Memoir of Commodore Joshua Barney" it is stated that he is one of a family of fourteen children. At the present time it has been impossible to find a record of more than seven, and the record is:

Children of William and Frances Holland (Watts)

Barney:

1. Elizabeth
Born April 27, 1745
2. Margaret
Born June 2, 1747
Died September 24, 1748
3. Peggy
Born August 21, 1749
4. John Holland
Born July 24, 1752
5. William Stevenson
Born December 28, 1754
6. Mary
Born August 20, 1757
7. Joshua
Born July 6, 1759
Died December 1, 1818

The burial place of Commodore Joshua Barney now (1912) is in the Allegheny Cemetery, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in a beautiful plot of ground set apart for naval heroes and named "Mount Barney."

Mrs. Barney must be in error in the statement, "It seldom occurred that more than one ship from the mother country visited the colony during the year," as at that time the mother country was fully realizing the value of her colonial possessions in America, and like other nations, she was seeking to extend those possessions, and ships to America were frequent.

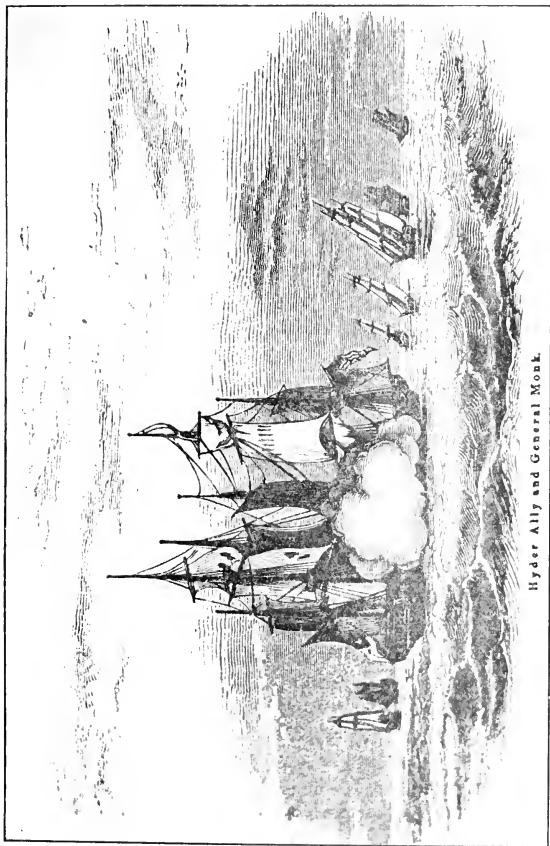

NOTE.—The book "A Biographical Memoir of the late Commodore Joshua Barney from Autographical Notes and Journals," edited by Mary Barney, 8 vo. 328 pages, has become rare. The edition was limited and was published in Boston by Gray and Bowen in 1832.

Doubts are entertained whether William Barney the first, 1695, mentioned by Mary Barney, came from England. The Barneys settled early in New England—1634—and took up the sea life, and during this period—from 1634 to 1695, it is only fair to suppose that one William Barney from some New England family, may have drifted away to Baltimore and become the progenitor of the Baltimore families. This fact, however, has not been established. Neither has Mary Barney given us the record of the ancestors of William, 1695.

Commodore Joshua Barney
during an
Interesting Period of Our Country

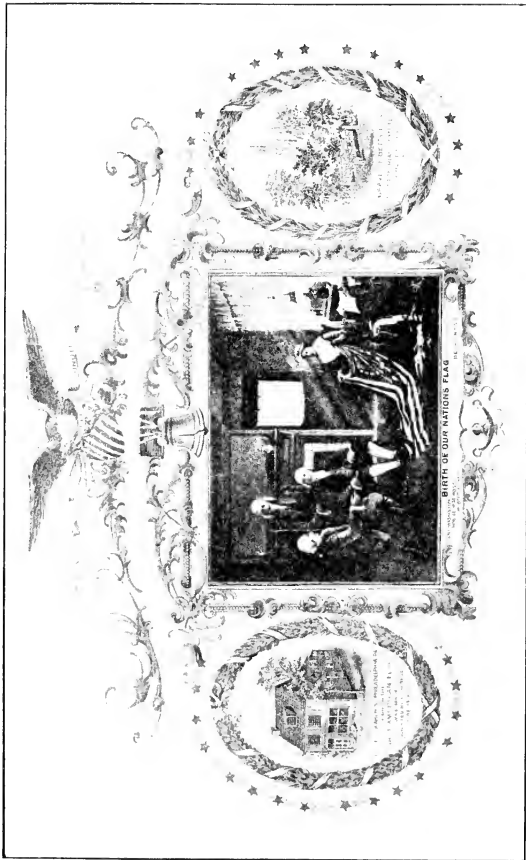

COMMODORE JOSHUA BARNEY
DURING AN
INTERESTING PERIOD OF OUR COUNTRY

In October 1775 the whole country was in a state of political excitement—the ferment was universal, and though perhaps but few individuals of the great mass that was then in motion had the remotest idea of a total disruption of the ties that connected them with the mother country, yet all were ready to fly to the resort of arms in defence of their colonial rights, upon which the Government of Great Britain had been gradually making encroachments, until her system had become insupportable, tyrannical, and oppressive. In the state of things that then existed it was natural that commercial enterprise should be in a great measure suspended. The mouth of the Chesapeake was watched by British ships of war, and the merchants of Baltimore, doubtful whether their most peaceful and legitimate intentions of trade would be respected, for the most part laid up their vessels. A Bermudian sloop about this time was purchased, armed with ten guns, and called the Hornet under the command of Capt. William Stone, with Joshua Barney as second officer or master's mate. A crew had not yet been shipped, and the duty of recruiting one was assigned to Joshua Barney. Fortunately for his purpose, just at this moment a new American flag, sent by Commodore Hopkins for the service of the Hornet, arrived from Philadelphia. Nothing could have been more opportune or acceptable. It was the first "Star Spangled Banner" that had been seen in the State of Maryland; and next morning at sunrise Barney had the enviable honor of unfurling it to the music of drums and fifes, and hoisting it upon a staff, planted with his own hands at the door of his rendezvous. The heart-stirring sounds of the martial instruments, then a novel incident in Baltimore, and the still more novel sight of the "rebel" colors gracefully waving in the breeze, attracted crowds of all ranks and eyes to the gay scene of the rendezvous, and before the setting of the same day's sun, the young recruiting officer had enlisted a full crew of jolly "rebels" for the Hornet.

BETSEY ROSS

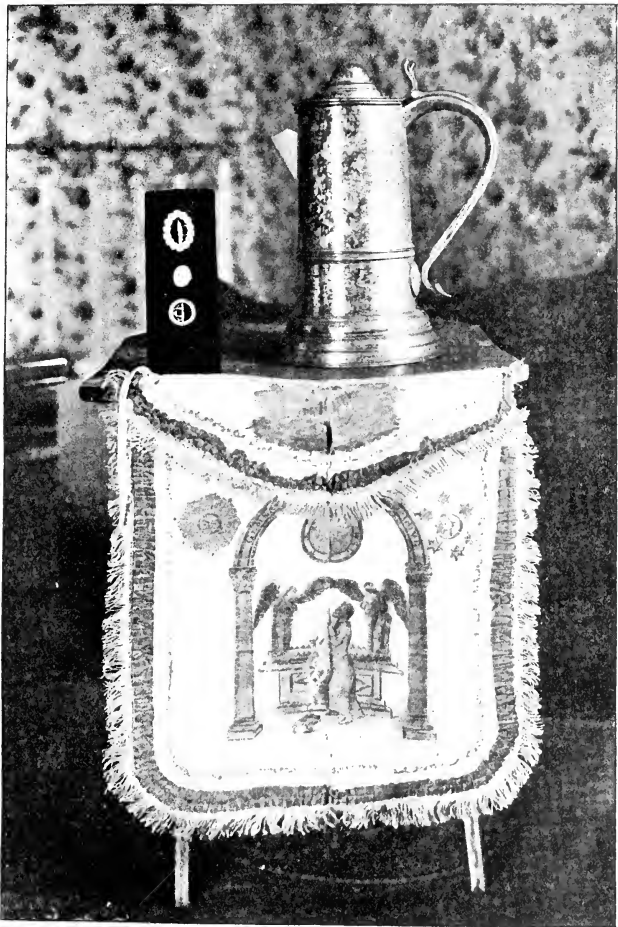

A quiet house, a quiet street,
A needle and a thread,
A scissors and a square of blue,
Some strips of white and red.
And slender hands that deftly stitched
The shining stars across—
'Twas thus the flag of Liberty
Was made by Betsey Ross.

Though Father Time has worn to rags
The ermine robes of kings,
And let the guns of war to rust
Among forgotten things;
Though crowns and sceptres at his touch
Have turned to dust and dross,
Yet not a broken stitch has marred
The work of Betsey Ross.

In stately hall and lowly home
 This day its colors wave,
The shelter of the world's oppressed,
 The beacon of the brave.
Let glory on the nation's shield
 Among the stars emboss
The thread, the needle and the name
 And fame of Betsey Ross.

In 1776, Lieutenant Joshua Barney sailed for the West Indies from Philadelphia in the Andrea Doria, a fine brig of 14 guns, under the command of Captain Robinson. On their arrival at St. Eustatia, they fired a salute to the fort, which the Governor, with more complaisance than prudence, returned—forgetting that he thus took upon himself to acknowledge the independence of their flag before their High Mightinesses at the Hague had decided, whether to listen to the remonstrances of Sir Joseph Yorke or to the solicitations of Dr. Franklin. For this premature instance of courtesy, the Governor was afterwards displaced, on the complaint of the English government; the fact, nevertheless, that he did return the salute of the Andrea Doria, contradicts the generally received impression that Captain Paul Jones was the first American officer, to whom such an honor had been paid by a foreign power. It was not until February, 1778, that Jones's salute was returned by the French Admiral at Brest.

On the 31st of March, 1778, the Virginia frigate, the first built in Baltimore, made an attempt to get to sea in the night, in which she would certainly have succeeded, in spite of the vigilance of the enemy's squadron, but that the pilot ran her on the middle ground, between the Capes; and on the first of April she was taken possession of by His Majesty's frigate the Emerald, Captain Caldwell. Captain Nicholson, the commander, escaped in the ship's barge; but Lieut. Joshua Barney, with his brother William Stevenson Barney, who was an officer of the marines, and the rest of the crew fell into the hands of the enemy.

In 1782, Delaware bay and river were infested with numerous "refugee barges and privateers," which were committing the most extensive depredations, not only upon the commerce of Philadelphia, but upon the peaceable inhabitants along the shores of every accessible stream that emptied into these waters. In order to drive off these plunderers—who were protected by the presence of several of His Majesty's ships—and to offer that assistance to their distressed citizens which it was not in the power of the general government to afford, the State of Pennsylvania had determined to fit out, at its own expense, a number of armed vessels, the operations of which were to be confined within the great thoroughfare to their capital. At this time Lieutenant Joshua Barney arrived at Philadelphia, and was honored with the command of one of the vessels to be equipped—a small ship, mounting sixteen six-pounders, and carrying one hundred and ten men, called the Hyder-Ally. On the 8th of April, he received instructions to convoy a fleet of merchantmen to the Capes, but on no account proceed to sea. The convoy dropped down to Cape May road; and while lying there, waiting for a fair wind to take him to sea, two ships and a brig were discovered standing for them.

Captain Joshua Barney, perceiving them to be a part of the enemy's force, made the signals to this convoy to get under way immediately and return up the bay—orders they were not slow to obey,—covered in their retreat by the Hyder-Ally. An action speedily ensued between the Hyder-Ally and one of the vessels, which proved to be the sloop-of-war General Monk, under the command of Captain Rogers, of the Royal Navy—nearly double his own force of metal, and nearly one-fourth superior in number of men! In attempting to luff athwart the hawse of the enemy, the Hyder-Ally ran foul, and in that position, within pistol shot, the two vessels fought desperately for half an hour, when the Monk struck her colors. Cooper, in his Naval History, says: "This action has been justly deemed one of the most brilliant that ever occurred under the American Flag. It was fought in the presence of a vastly superior force that was not engaged, and the ship taken was in every essential respect superior to her conqueror." The General Monk was formerly the American ship General Washington, captured by Admiral Arbuthnot, and placed in the king's service under a new name. Both vessels arrived at Philadelphia a few hours after the action, bearing their respective dead. The General Monk lost twenty men killed and had thirty-three wounded. Among the former were the first lieutenant, purser, surgeon, boatswain and gunner; among the latter were Captain Rogers himself, and every officer on board, except one midshipman! The Hyder-Ally had four men killed and eleven wounded. The old name General Washington was restored to the prize, and Barney made a cruise in her on a secret mission to the West Indies.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania passed a vote of thanks to Captain Barney, and ordered a gold-hilted sword to be prepared, which was afterwards presented to him, in the name of the state, by Governor Dickinson. It was a small sword with mountings of chased gold—the guard of which, on the one side had a representation of the Hyder-Ally, and on the other the General Monk, the sails of each ship set as in the action—the latter ship in the action of striking her flag. Their hulls, sails, masts, spars and rigging, were all beautifully delineated by the artist, in open work, resembling the ivory fans of the Chinese.

We deem it proper to add, as a part of the history of this brilliant affair, that a painting representing the action between the Hyder-Ally and the General Monk, was executed in 1802 by L. P. Crépin in Paris by order of Commodore Barney, while in the service of the French Republic, and presented by him on his return to the United States, to Robert Smith, Esquire, then secretary of the navy. This action took place at the entrance of the Delaware Bay, April 8th, 1782. The painting is now in the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, and is reproduced in this volume.

Ballads were made upon the brilliant victory of the Hyder-Ally over the General Monk, and sung through the streets of Philadelphia, and the name of the gallant

Barney was in every mouth, "familiar as household words."

As many have never had an opportunity of seeing how such things were managed in "days of old," we copy from an old volume of "Freneau's Poems" published in 1786, the following songs, composed for the occasion by our revolutionary Poet Laureate.

THE SAILOR'S INVITATION

Come all ye lads that know no fear,
To wealth and honor we will steer
In the Hyder-Ally Privateer,
Commanded by bold Barney.

She's new and true and tight and sound,
Well rigged aloft and all well found—
Come and be with laurel crown'd—
Away and leave your lasses!

Accept our terms without delay,
And make your fortunes while you may—
Such offers are not every day
In the power of the jolly sailor.

Success and fame attend the brave,
But death the coward and the slave—
Who fears to plough the Atlantic wave
To seek out bold invaders!

Come then and take a cruising bout—
Our ship sails well, there is no doubt;
She has been tried both in and out,
And answers expectations.

Let no proud foes that Britain bore
Distress our trade, insult our shore—
Teach them to know their reign is o'er,
Bold Philadelphia sailors!

We'll teach them not to sail so near,
Or venture on the Delaware,
When we in warlike trim appear,
And cruise about Henlopen.

Who cannot wounds and battle dare,
Shall never clasp the blooming fair;
The brave alone their charms shall share,
The brave, and their protectors!

With hand and heart united all
Prepared to conquer or to fall,
Attend, my lads! to honor's call—
Embark on our Hyder-Ally!

From an Eastern Prince she takes her name,
Who, smit with freedom's sacred flame,
Usurping Britons brought to shame,
His country's wrongs avenging.

See on her stern the brilliant stars—
Inured to blood, inured to wars,
Come enter quick, my jolly tars,
To scourge these haughty Britons!

Though stormy oceans round us roll,
We'll keep a firm undaunted soul,
Befriended by the cheering bowl,
Sworn foes to melancholy!

While timorous landsmen lurk on shore,
'Tis ours to go where cannons roar—
On a coasting cruise we'll go once more,
Despisers of all danger.—

And fortune still, that crowns the brave
Shall guard us o'er the gloomy wave—
A fearful heart betrays a knave!
Success to the Hyder-Ally.

The text of the following was written a few days after the battle, and is entitled a "Song on Captain Barney's Victory over the Ship General Monk." In all there are twelve verses; we copy one verse only:

O'er the waste of waters cruising,
Long the General Monk had reign'd,
All subduing, all reducing—
None her lawless rage restrain'd!
Many a brave and hearty fellow,
Yielding to this warlike woe,
When her guns began to bellow,
Struck his humbled colors low!

It is to be regretted that the music to which these ballads were sung cannot be indicated.

NOTE.—In "The Naval Monument," a book published in 1815 at Concord, Massachusetts, U. S. A., by A. Bowen, an account appears of the reception given in France to Lieutenant Joshua Barney, the hero of some dashing naval exploits during the Revolutionary War and who was sent by our Government to Paris with despatches to Franklin. Mr. Bowen's book states that a certain musical "skit," called "Barney, leave the girls alone," owed its origin to the kiss publicly bestowed on the American officer by the beautiful Marie Antoinette, and was composed by Count O'L. of the Irish Brigade, who was present at court when the royal familiarity took place; and he stated that the maids of honor were all so eager to follow the gracious example set by the lovely queen that Mr. Barney became an object of envy and dislike to the entire beau monde.

BARNEY LEAVE THE GIRLS ALONE

Judy leads me such a life! (Repeat)
The devil n'er had such a wife;
What can the matter be?
For, if I sing the funny song
Of Dolly put the kettle on,
She's mocking at me all day long;
What can the matter be?

Mr. Barney leave the girls alone! (Repeat)
Why don't you leave the girls alone,
And let them quiet be?

Put the muffins down to roast, (Repeat)
Blow the fire and make the toast;
We'll all take tea.
Barney your a wicked boy, (Repeat)
And you do always play and toy
With all the gals you see.

Mr. Barney leave the girls alone! (Repeat)
Why don't you leave the girls alone,
And let them quiet be?
Mr. Barney leave the girls alone! (Repeat)
Why don't you leave the girls alone,
And let them quiet be?

Barney rock the cradle, O! (Repeat)
Or else you'll get the ladle, O!
When Judy harps to-day.

SPOKEN.—Barney, rock the cradle, or I'll break your pate with the ladle; yes you dog, if you don't mind your P's and Q's, I'll comb your head with a three-legged stool. You see, the other afternoon I was ax'd out to take a comfortable dish of four shilling schou-schong tea, and I sat alongside of Miss Polly Spriggins; I saw she got quite smitten with my countenance—says she to me, Mr. Barney will you have a game of hunt the slipper? With all my heart, says I, then my wife bawled out, from the other end of the parlour,

Mr. Barney leave the girls alone, (Repeat)
Why don't you leave the girls alone,
And let them quiet be?
Judy she loves whiskey, O! (Repeat)
She goes to uncle's shop at night,
And spends an hour or two;
Then Barney, what must Barney do,
But take a drop of whiskey too, (Last page in book)

Mr. Croggon's copy is unfortunately incomplete, and probably a certain portion of the end of the song is missing. No copy of "The American Songster" including the above "Skit" complete is known to be in the custody of any Library.

Adoption of the Constitution of the United States, 1788

ADOPTION OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, 1788

On the 28th of April, 1788, the Maryland state convention passed a resolution to adopt the constitution for the United States without amendments. In July of the same year, eleven of the states having in the meantime declared in favor of the adoption, the instrument was confirmed and ratified by Congress. The people everywhere testified their joy at this event by some public demonstration. In Baltimore a procession was formed on Philpot's Hill in which both parties, forgetting their recent feuds, joined in fraternal harmony. The mechanical trades, the liberal professions, all united in the procession and respectively displayed their appropriate banners. Commodore Barney performed a conspicuous part on this occasion. He had a small boat fifteen feet in length, completely rigged and perfectly equipped as a ship, which was called the Federalist, which being mounted upon four wheels and drawn by the same number of horses, took its place in the procession. He commanded the ship and was honored with a crew of captains who, at his word and the boatswain's pipe, went through all the various manœuvres of making and taking in sail, to the great delight of the crowded windows, doors and balconies by which they passed. The ship was immediately followed by all the captains, mates and seamen at that time in the port of Baltimore. It was paraded through all the principal streets of Fell's Point and the other portions of the city, and finally anchored on the beautiful and lofty bank southwest of the Basin, which from that occurrence received and has ever since borne the name of "Federal Hill." This idea of carrying a full-rigged ship in procession originated entirely with Captain Barney. After the pageant was over, it was resolved to present the ship to General Washington, in the name of the merchants and ship-masters of Baltimore. It was launched and navigated by Commodore Barney down the Chesapeake Bay down to the mouth of the Potomac and thence up the river to Mount Vernon. General Washington received it with an appropriate letter under date of June 8, 1778.

General Washington having been unanimously chosen president of the United States in 1789, arrived in Baltimore on his way to Congress at New York on the 17th of April. He was met some miles from town by a large body of respectable citizens on horseback and conducted to Mr. Grant's tavern. A great number of citizens were presented and were graciously received by this illustrious man.

The address in behalf of the citizens of Baltimore was signed by the following persons:

MILL PRISON, PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND

For a suspected attempt with others to break from prison while being held as a prisoner of war in Mill Prison, Plymouth, England, in 1780, Commodore Barney was confined in solitary dungeon for thirty days, in heavy irons.

“Mill Prison” was situated in the center of an extensive court, surrounded by high, double walls with an area of twenty feet between them. Numerous sentinels were posted, not only among the prisoners within the building and court, but in the area between the surrounding walls, and along the whole line of the outer wall. The gates in the two walls were placed over against each other; the upper one was formed of an iron paling eight feet high; the lower one stood open for the most part all day, in order to allow free communication with the keeper of the prison, whose office stood in the area. From eight o'clock in the morning until sunset, the prisoners were allowed the freedom of the courtyard.

Commodore Barney
in New England

COMMODORE BARNEY IN NEW ENGLAND

Commodore Joshua Barney returned to United States in 1781, arriving in Beverly in December on ship Cicero, direct from Corunna, Spain. Here he received an offer from Messrs. Cabot to command their privateer, but declined the offer. From Beverly he went to Salem, remaining here and visiting Boston in January and February, leaving Boston after weeks of pleasure spent in New England. On the night of his arrival at Boston a snow storm commenced which continued for several days and covered the roads to such a depth as to interrupt all the ordinary modes of traveling; he was compelled in consequence to remain in Boston for several weeks. Finally, with a friend, the trip to Baltimore was undertaken in a sleigh, and on March 21, 1782, he arrived in Baltimore, the journey from Princeton, New Jersey, being made in a carriage.

The years from 1798-1802 were spent in Paris by Commodore Barney, in hopes of having his claims paid for services and money advanced while in the service of the French navy, but without success. He now demanded his discharge from the French service, which was at first politely refused by Napoleon, but eventually granted in 1802, and Commodore Barney was placed on the pension roll with an annuity of fifteen hundred dollars, which he declined.

In 1805 Commodore Barney was offered the superintendence of the Navy Yard at Washington, but declined.

Commodore Joshua Barney arrived at Newport, Rhode Island in his schooner Rossie, the last of August, 1812, from a cruise along the eastern coast of the United States. During his absence he captured fifteen vessels. Nine of the number he burned or sunk. Commodore Barney remained in this port about eight or ten days. He returned home to Baltimore in November.

NOTE.—The HORNET and the WASP on which Commodore Barney served during the Revolutionary War, are not the same as the vessels of those names which served in the war of 1812. The former were blown up in Delaware Bay in 1777 to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy.

From the Federal Gazette, September 4, 1813. Commodore Joshua Barney and L. Taylor, both of Baltimore, fought a duel in Virginia. Taylor was wounded, but not dangerously.

A splendid public dinner was given to Commodore John Rodgers on the 7th of April, 1814, at William Stevenson Barney's Fountain Inn, Baltimore. The company was numerous and of the first respectability. The mayor, Edward Johnson, presided, assisted by Major McKim and N. Williams. The toasts were eminently patriotic.

Battle of Bladensburg, Maryland,
August 25, 1814

BATTLE OF BLADENSBURG, MARYLAND

August 24, 1814

About four or five miles northeast of Washington, on the east branch of the Potomac River in Prince George County, and not far over the line separating Maryland from the District of Columbia is Bladensburg, named in honor of Thomas Bladen, one of the early governors of Maryland. Before Washington was founded this was a promising village. In the early days, the route between the capital and Baltimore led through here, a stage coach making daily trips each way, and it was thought to be a town with a bright future. The shallow stream which now divides and flows on both sides of the town was then a river of good size.

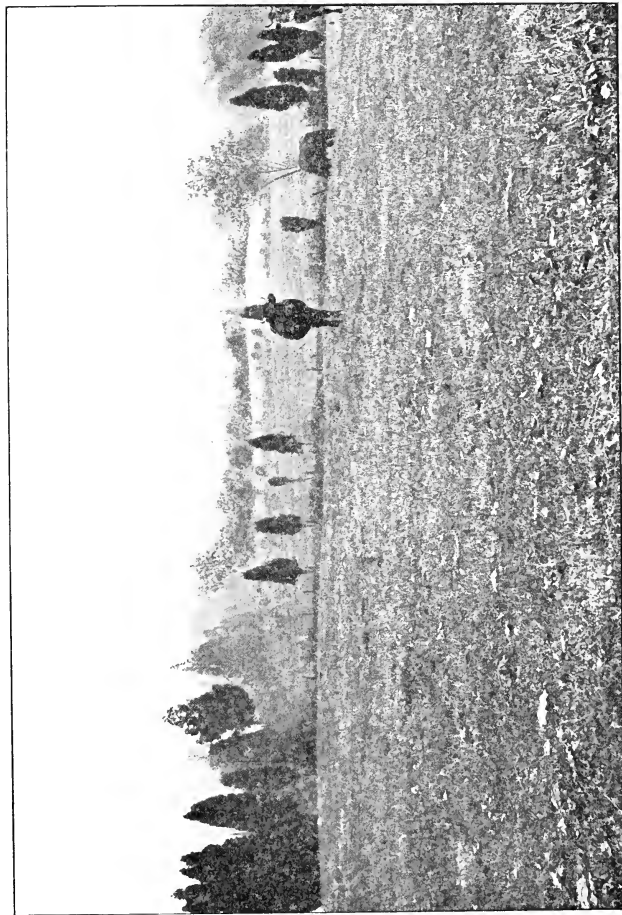

One of the earliest postoffices in this country was established here.

Calvert Hall, once the residence of the descendant of Lord Baltimore, the founder of Maryland, is located here. Within its walls Henry Clay drafted his famous compromise bill in 1827; here Lafayette was received and entertained, and Daniel Webster was a frequent and welcome visitor. An historical society has recently purchased this place and intends to restore the house to its original condition, and under the name of the Calvert Hall of History, to make it a repository of the records and relics of the family by whom it was founded.

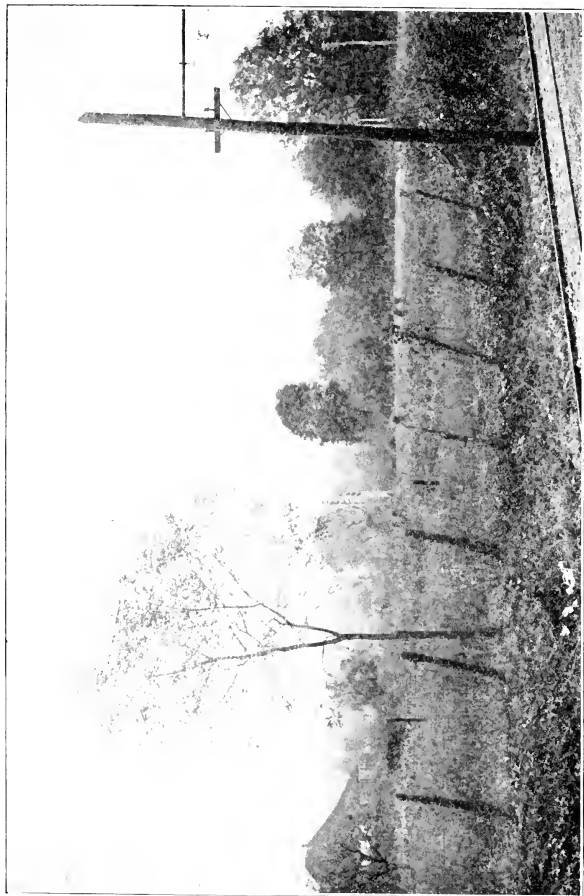

At the battle of Bladensburg, August 24, 1814, Commodore Barney was conspicuous. With a battery and six hundred marines, he was stationed by an old mill which is still standing, near the bridge spanning the river, and seems to have done most of the fighting. Of the British loss, the greater number was at this point. The Americans stood their ground against the British veterans for a time, and the British Colonel in command was killed.

Commodore Barney, during the fight, was badly wounded. The battle lasted from one o'clock to four o'clock in the afternoon. Our forces were pursued by the enemy, who entered Washington that evening.

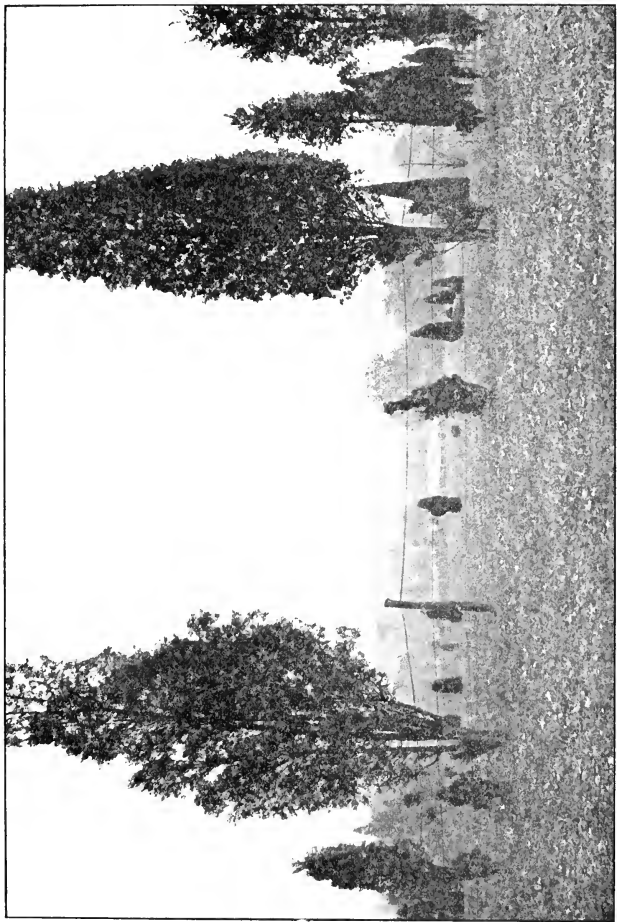

During the preparation for the battle, the President, the Attorney-General, the Secretaries of State and War, two members of Congress and Francis Scott Key (who a few days later wrote the Star Spangled Banner), came to the field.

A Sword Presented to Commodore Barney by the City of Washington and a description of the same as it appeared in Mrs.
Mary Barney's "Biographical
Memoir of Commodore
Joshua Barney"

RESOLVED, By the Board of Aldermen and Board of Common Council of the City of Washington, That the Mayor be, and he hereby is, authorized to present to Commodore Barney a sword, as a testimonial of the high sense which this Corporation entertains of his distinguished gallantry and good conduct in the battle of Bladensburg.

RESOLVED, That the Mayor be and he hereby is authorized to present through Commodore Barney, the thanks of the Corporation to the gallant officers and men, who served under his orders on the twenty-fourth of August last—and to assure them this Corporation entertains the most lively sense of their services on that day.

(Signed) R. C. WEIGHTMAN,

President of the Board of Common Council.

Approved September 28, 1814.

JO. GALES, JR.,

President pro tempore of the Board of Aldermen.

JAMES BLAKE, Mayor.

“We have been favored with the following description of the sword lately presented to Commodore Joshua Barney by the Corporation of this City, in testimony of the intrepidity and valor displayed by him and the handful of men under his immediate command, in defence of the City of Washington, on the twenty-fourth day of August, 1814. The sword is elegant—the device on it is handsome. On the outer side of the blade is a mythologic emblem. It is a figure with helmet, visor up, holding on the left arm a fasces indicative of the genius of the Union; the left foot is in the prow of a galley, and the right is on the land; the right hand holds an inverted spear erect on a globe, indicative of valor and military renown by sea and by land.

*Sword presented to Commodore Joshua Barney

“The rest are the usual technical and military trophies and a naval crown.

“The blade is damasked, clouded, purpled, gilt and purpled, with the point and edge highly burnished, and it has a shell, containing the eagle with the anchor, surrounded by eighteen stars. The hilt, an eagle head, the guard a stirrup with trophies, and the whole mounting, scabbard and hilt and guard, are of solid pure silver, highly gilt.

“The following inscription appears on the blade: ‘In testimony of the intrepidity and valor of Commodore Joshua Barney, and the handful of men under his immediate command in the defense of the City of Washington on the twenty-fourth of August, 1814—the Corporation of the city have bestowed on him this sword.’ ”

NOTE—Much has been said regarding the intense heat at the time of the Battle of Bladensburg and as a possible excuse for not arriving at better results for the American Army; but why should not these men have stood their ground as did the Acton Minute Men in the fight at Concord Bridge, and Lexington, April 19, 1775, resulting in the British being driven many miles in a running fight on a day equally warm?

NOTE.—It was the secretary of the navy William Jones who gave orders to Commodore Joshua Barney to sail with the boats under his command to the defence of Washington and early in July moved his flotilla up to Nottingham about forty miles from Washington a small village on the Patuxent.

ELEGIAC STANZAS ON THE DEATH OF SIR
PETER PARKER

This gallant officer fell in August, 1814, in his twenty-ninth year, whilst commanding, on shore, a party belonging to his ship, the Menelaus, and animating them in storming the American camp near Bladensburg. He was Lord Byron's first cousin; but they had never met since boyhood.

There is a tear for all that die,
A mourner o'er the humblest grave;
But nations swell the funeral cry,
And Triumph weeps above the brave.

For them in Sorrow's purest sigh
O'er Ocean's heaving bosom sent:
In vain their bones unburied lie,
All earth becomes their monument!

A tomb is their's on every page,
An epitaph on every tongue:
The present hours, the future age,
For them bewail, to them belong.

For them the voice of festal mirth
Grows hush'd, their name the only sound;
While deep Remembrance pours to Worth
The goblet's tributary round.

A theme to crowds that knew them not,
Lamented by admiring foes,
Who would not share their glorious lot?
Who would not die the death they chose?

And, gallant Parker! thus enshrined
Thy life, thy fall, thy fame shall be;
And early valour, glowing, find
A model in thy memory.

But there are breasts that bleed with thee
In woe, that glory cannot quell;
And shuddering hear of victory,
Where one so dear, so dauntless fell.
(Byron)

It has been mentioned that young Joshua Barney was the first individual to unfurl the banner of the Union in his native state, in October, 1775; it is a remarkable coincidence that he was also the last officer to quit its service, in July, 1784, having been for many months before the only officer retained by the United States. His native city, Baltimore, was the scene of both incidents.

Commodore Joshua Barney took part in seventeen battles during the Revolutionary War and in nine battles during the War of 1812.

For the valuable services of her husband, Congress granted Mrs. Barney a pension for life.

“In the character of Commodore Barney we recognize all the elements of a popular hero. To a noble and commanding presence he added that cordiality and kindness of manner which is universally recognized, and with his fidelity in the discharge of duty, he commanded the esteem of every administration he served and the affection of every man he commanded.”

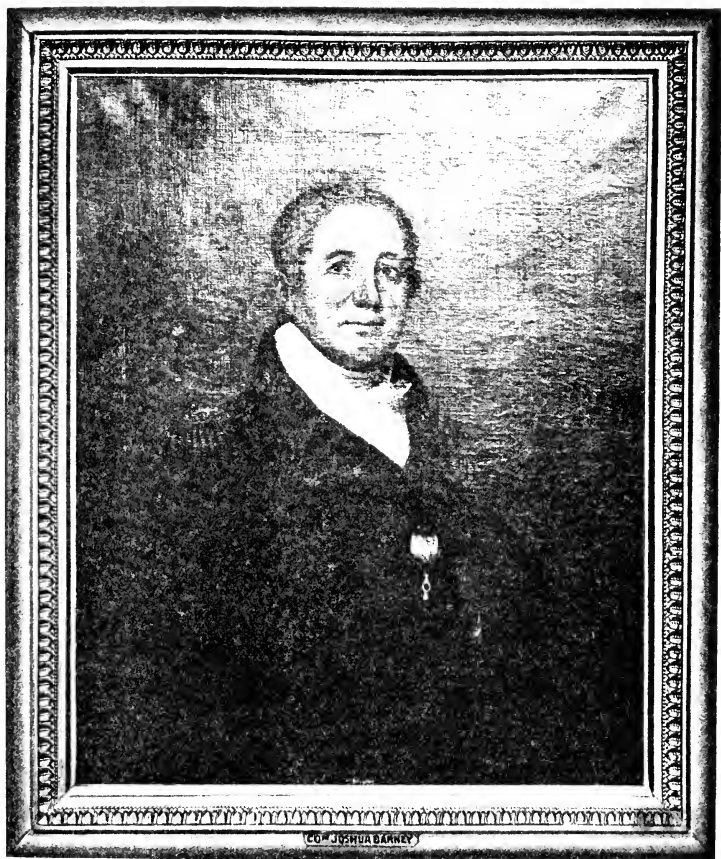

The intelligence of the death of Commodore Joshua Barney reached Baltimore December 7, 1818. At an extra session of the city council held soon after, the following resolution was passed, which will show the respect entertained for his memory by his native city:

“Resolved, by the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore,

That the Mayor and Presidents of the two branches be and are hereby authorized and required to employ Mr. Rembrandt Peale to execute from the best likeness that can be obtained in this city, a portrait of our late distinguished fellow citizen Commodore Joshua Barney; and that the said portrait be placed in the chamber of the first branch, as a testimony of respect for his memory and gratitude for his patriotic services.”

We gather the following from the newspapers of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

The Mercury, December 4, 1818

DIED.—In this city, on Tuesday last, Commodore JOSHUA BARNEY, late of Baltimore. This gentleman highly distinguished himself during the revolutionary and the last war, by his ardent attachment to his country, by the signal services he rendered her; and by the intrepidity of his conduct in the most trying and dangerous situations. His name will long be remembered by his grateful countrymen. The commodore was on his way to Kentucky, with his family.

On Wednesday, his remains were interred in the burial ground of First Presbyterian Church. Although he died among strangers, yet his fellow citizens were not strangers to his distinguished worth and services. The manner in which the last sad rites were performed to his memory, and the immense concourse which attended on the occasion, mournfully evinced the high interest they felt in witnessing the departure of another of the revolutionary heroes.

The following was the order of procession:

1. The City Guards.
2. The Military.
3. Masonick brethren in Lodges.
4. Clergy and Physicians.
5. The CORPSE—surmounted, as a pall, with the United States Flag, under which the gallant commodore achieved his distinguished victory over the General Monk.
6. Mourners.
7. The Corporation of the City.
8. The Judiciary.
9. Gentlemen of the Bar.
10. Citizens.

We understand that the commodore died of a Bilious Cholick. His indisposition was of but a few days duration. Agreeably to his request the ball which he received from the enemy at the battle of Bladensburgh, was searched for after his decease. It had entered on the side of his thigh a few inches above the knee, and was extracted from his hip, to which it had passed along the thigh bone. It proved to be a large musket ball.

NOTE.—This ball is now (1912) in possession of Miss Elizabeth Young Thompson, Baltimore.

Pittsburgh Gazette, December 4, 1818.

DIED, in this place on Tuesday evening the 1st of December, on his way to Kentucky, Commodore JOSHUA BARNEY, in the 67th year of his age.

The utmost respect was shown to the memory of this distinguished officer, in performing the last duties that are due by the laws of Christianity and of custom. He was buried with Military and Masonic honours, the regular troops from the Arsenal and from Lieut. M'Cabe's company, being joined by the City Guards under Captain Trevillo. The Mayor of the city of Pittsburgh, with the Corporation, the Clergy, and the different professions marching in procession as separate bodies.

In announcing the death of this brave man it would have given us pleasure to have been able to offer a sketch of the history of his public life. We, however, only know it, with certainty, by two actions; but these two are of that brilliant order, as to be sufficient to gild his memory with never dying fame. We allude to the affairs of the capture of the "General Monk" and the "Battle of Bladensburgh." The former was an act of daring courage never surpassed, and of the same class of splendid achievement that was displayed by Paul Jones, in the action between the "Good Man Richard" and the "Serapis." The "General Monk" was an elegant copper bottomed sloop, carrying eighteen 9 pounders, and commanded by Captain Rodgers; the "Hyder-Ally" only carried four 9, and twelve 6 pounders. The engagement took place on the 26th of April, 1782, within Cape May.

So convinced were the British that our ship would be taken, that in anticipation of the event, she was advertised for sale in New York, in "Rivington's Royal Gazette." The legislature of Pennsylvania voted Captain Barney an elegant sword, as a reward for his gallantry. On this occasion, it is but justice to observe, that Captain Barney received the most important aid from Captain Edward Scull, brother to Mr. John Scull, late editor of this paper. Captain Scull commanded a body of marines recruited by himself, and behaved in such a manner as to merit the particular thanks of the Commodore, which this officer, with that liberality which distinguishes brave minds, publicly offered at the Coffee House in Philadelphia. The conduct of Com. Barney at Bladensburgh, is too recent in the minds of every American to need repeating; it was such as to command the unequivocal admiration of his enemies, and to redeem in some measure, the disgraces of that fatal day. We believe that at the time of his death, he held a lucrative post in Baltimore, given by his government, as a reward for his services.

In obedience to a wish frequently expressed by the Commodore, the ball he received at the battle of Bladensburgh was extracted after his death by Drs. Dawson and Mowry; it was found lodged near the lesser trochanter, flattened next the bone.

DEATH OF COMMODORE JOSHUA BARNEY

Commodore Barney was on his way to Kentucky with his family, intending to make that state his future residence—when his career was stopped by one of those visitations of Providence, to which all are liable. The situation of his distressed widow and children, thus suddenly deprived of their protector and friend, in a strange place, is better conceived than described.

Every respect was shown to the memory of this gallant and celebrated officer, which times and circumstances would admit of. As one of the heroes of the revolution, he was beloved and respected—and as the champion of Bladensburgh he was every where received with enthusiasm. One of the most celebrated naval engagements which took place during the revolutionary war, was fought by Commodore Barney, on board the Hyder-Ally, against the General Monk, a vessel of superior force commanded by Captain Rogers, the former carrying only four nine and twelve six pounders—and the latter eighteen nine pounders. This engagement was fought within Cape May, on the 26th of April, 1782, and gained for the Commodore the applause and thanks of his country. For his gallantry on the occasion, the legislature of Pennsylvania voted him an elegant sword.

“On this occasion, it is but justice to observe, that Captain Barney received the most important aid from Captain Edward Scull, brother to Mr. John Scull, late editor of the Pittsburgh Gazette. Captain Scull commanded a body of marines recruited by himself, and behaved in such a manner as to merit the particular thanks of the Commodore, which this officer, with that liberality which distinguishes brave minds, publicly offered at the Coffee House in Philadelphia.”

The conduct of Commodore Barney, at the battle of Bladensburgh, is recollected by all. In this engagement he was wounded and taken prisoner by General Ross and Admiral COCKBURN, and parolled on the spot. The ball could not be extracted, and in the opinion of the physicians was the final cause of his death. In compliance with a wish often expressed by the commodore in his lifetime, the ball was extracted after his death by Drs. Dawson and Mowry; it was found lodged near the trochanter minor of the right femurs, flattened next the bone.

 The age of Commodore Barney has been misstated in one of our papers. He was born in Baltimore on the 6th July, 1759, and was in his 60th year. He was but 23 years of age when he took the Gen. Monk. His disease was not a bilious cholic, as was reported, but lumbago and inflammatory sore throat, &c.

The Pittsburgh Gazette, December 25, 1818.

Com. Barney.—Dr. Ewell, who remained in Washington during its occupation by the British troops, has affixed to a late Medical work, a sketch of the principal incidents of that period. The following paragraph will be read with interest.

“The saying that ‘brave men are always generous’,

“Ross manifested in praising Com. Barney for his be-

There have been two boats named for Commodore Joshua Barney by the United States government. The first was a paddle-wheel steamer built in New York, purchased under the name ETHAN ALLEN, October 2, 1861, and sold in 1868. She was called the COMMODORE BARNEY. The second, the torpedo boat BARNEY, built during the war with Spain in 1900.

“THE TORPEDO BOAT BARNEY”

After the war with Spain, the United States decided to increase the navy and a number of torpedo boats were built, these all to be named for distinguished naval officers, one to be called the Barney. The Secretary of the Navy remarked to Miss Nannie Dornin Barney, then engaged in one of the departments of the navy, and a great grand-child of Commodore Joshua Barney, that she ought to be the one to christen the boat and the Secretary wrote to that effect to the Company having the boat under construction. Later Miss Barney went on a trip to Europe and while absent a letter, and later a telegram with information that she was to be sponsor on the occasion of the launching, were received. In the absence of Miss Barney, it was suggested that her sister, Miss Esther N. Barney, act in her place, and subsequently the honor was offered to and accepted by Esther N. Barney, of Fredericksburg, Virginia. The christening took place Saturday, July 28, 1900.

TORPEDO BOAT BARNEY

Rides on Kennebec Tide After Successful Launch

The torpedo boat Barney was launched July 28, 1900, from the Bath Iron Works at 1:37, in the presence of a congregation that filled every advantage ground from which a glimpse of the craft could be obtained.

The gates of the works were thrown open to the public at 1:15 and before 1:30, the time announced for the launching, it is estimated that two thousand people were assembled.

A platform was erected at the bow of the Barney, decorated with flags and bunting, and was occupied by the launching party who arrived at 1:28.

Miss Esther Nicholson Barney of Fredericksburg, Virginia, had the honor of christening the boat. She is the daughter of the late Captain J. N. Barney, and the great granddaughter of the late Commodore Joshua Barney of Revolutionary fame for whom the craft is named. She was accompanied by her mother, and sister, Mrs. J. W. Adams, and nephew, Nicholson Barney Adams of Fredericksburg, Virginia.

The craft started at 1:37 and slid overboard so noiselessly that many in the rear ranks of the audience did not know that the event had taken place. Miss Barney, as the craft started, smashed a bottle of American champagne across the stem, saying, "I christen thee Barney.” The bottle was decorated with red, white and blue ribbon.

The Barney is one of the three boats contracted for. The principal dimensions of the boat are:

Length between perpendiculars 157 ft. Beam moulded 17 feet. Depth at centre amidships 10 feet 9 inches. Mean draft of water on trial 4 feet, 8 inches. Displacement on trial 160 tons. Speed on trial (2 hours) 28 knots.

The armament consists of three 3-pounder S. A. R. F. guns and three tubes for short 18-inch Whitehead torpedoes. Ample ammunition is carried for the guns and there is provision for carrying five torpedoes.

There is a conning tower forward made of half inch nickel steel with a searchlight mounted on top of it. Coal bunkers are located on each side of the boilers and on one side of each engine.

The propelling machinery consists of two vertical triple expansion engines and two water tube boilers each in a separate watertight compartment.

There are eleven large water tight compartments separated by transverse bulkheads. Some of these compartments are further subdivided by longitudinal bulkheads, making a total of fifteen water tight divisions in all. The two compartments at the middle of the boat are occupied by the main engine and condensers and the auxiliaries. Just forward and just aft of these compartments are the boiler compartments, each containing one boiler and the usual fire room auxiliaries.

The two compartments forward of the forward boiler are occupied by the crew, while the one just aft of the after boiler is devoted to the officers and the one aft of that to the petty officers.

The boat is fitted with steam steering gear and steam windlass. There is also an electric light plant of about 60 lights capacity.

The people of Fredericksburg, Virginia, were much interested in the torpedo boat Barney.

The petition presented to Congress asking that a circle in Washington, District of Columbia, be named for Commodore Joshua Barney, has been favorably acted upon. The petition covers a request also for funds to erect a monument in his honor.

CAPTAIN JEROME BONAPARTE

CAPTAIN JEROME BONAPARTE

In the year 1796 Captain Joshua Barney of the American Navy received a rank in the French Navy equal to that of commodore in the service of the United States. From this service he obtained release in 1802 and returned to his home in Baltimore. Jerome Bonaparte, the youngest brother of Napoleon, was in early life placed in the naval service of France and during the time that Captain Joshua Barney was connected with the French government, the two young naval officers became acquainted and the friendship lasted well through life. Lieutenant Jerome Bonaparte accompanied a French expedition to the island of St. Domingo, which proved unsuccessful and later he returned to France as bearer of despatches and in 1802 sailed for New York in command of a French frigate. Of course the fame of Napoleon insured for Jerome a cordial reception in America and he was received with great honors wherever he went. Soon after his arrival in New York, the young naval officer found his way to Baltimore and here he met with a distinguished reception from Captain Barney and other prominent citizens of the place. At the house of Samuel Chase, one of the Maryland signers of the Declaration of Independence and father of Mary who in 1808 married William Bedford Barney, eldest son of Commodore Joshua Barney, Captain Bonaparte met a great number of persons in high social, political and literary life. *It was here that he made the acquaintance of Miss Elizabeth Patterson whom he subsequently married.

The social life of Baltimore during the visit of Captain Bonaparte was brilliant, and Captain Barney was a faithful friend in keeping young Bonaparte in touch with cultured Baltimore. At Govanstown the races were attended by the beauty and social element of Baltimore and it is stated that one day as Jerome rode out to the races from Baltimore that he was one of the most superb-looking men then living. It is claimed by Mary Chase Barney in her "Biographical Memoirs of Commodore Joshua Barney," that it was at one of these social events that Bonaparte, in company with Commodore Barney, first met Miss Patterson. Later Commodore Barney very prudently and firmly remonstrated with young Bonaparte against forming an attachment with the young lady, situated as he was, and he also felt it his duty to make the same representations to the family of Miss Patterson and thus instead of assisting Jerome in the step which he seemed resolved upon taking, young Barney did everything that strict propriety would justify to prevent its consummation.

On his visit young Bonaparte was invited by Commodore Barney to reside with him during his stay in Baltimore. The invitation was gratefully accepted and he remained several weeks to enjoy the hospitality of his family. Jerome was accompanied by his friend General Reubel, a secretary, physician and a

BALTIMORE

In the Federal Gazette of Tuesday, December 27, 1803, is the following:

“Married on Saturday evening last by the Reverend Bishop Carroll Mr. Jerome Bonaparte, youngest brother of the First Consul of the French Republic to Miss Elizabeth Patterson eldest daughter of William Patterson of this city.

In a letter dated at New York September 5th, 1804, addressed to her father William Patterson, Baltimore, Maryland, Mrs. Bonaparte writes:

“We have made a journey here for nothing, as General Armstrong, the Ambassador, after writing to Mr. Bonaparte that he would be delighted at taking me to France with him, changed his mind and went off without me. To-morrow we are to leave this place for Philadelphia and from thence we go to Springfield (Maryland) immediately.”

Jerome Bonaparte with his bride visited West Brookfield this same year (1804), and probably on this same trip.

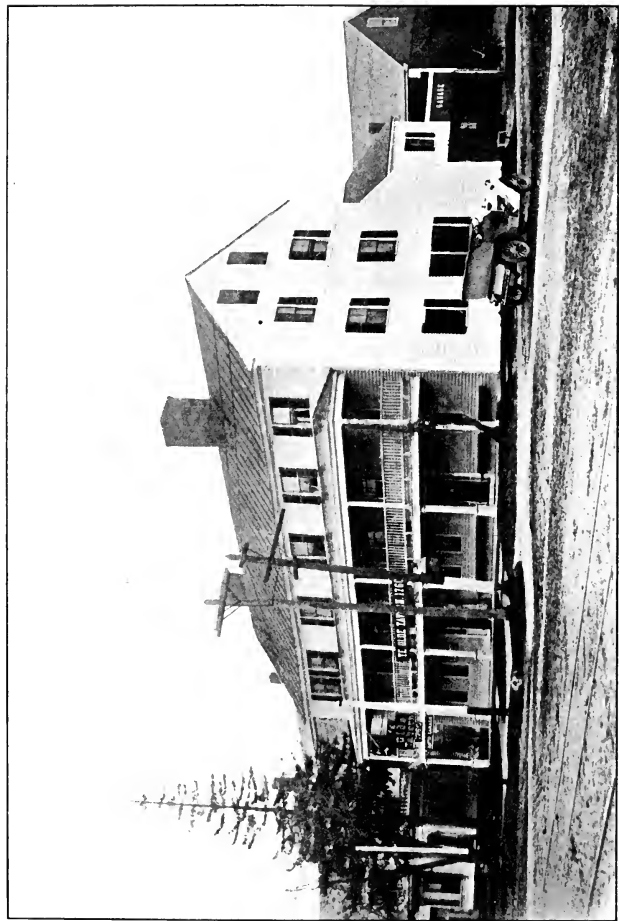

Monument erected to the memory of Elizabeth Patterson Bonaparte,
Green Mount Cemetery, Baltimore, Maryland.

Didier's History, page 167, states that "Madam Bonaparte sailed from Europe (France) July 15, 1824 and arrived in New York harbor at the end of August. She was met by her son and she accompanied him to Lancaster, Massachusetts. She returned in November and her son accompanied her (from Lancaster, near Fitchburg) to Hartford, where she took the steamer for New York on her way to Baltimore." The route was undoubtedly through Springfield, as this was the regular highway.

Miss Elizabeth Patterson, after her marriage in 1803, called herself Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte until she obtained a divorce from the Legislature of Maryland in 1814 with permission to resume her maiden name. From that time onward she always signed herself "Elizabeth Patterson," but was very generally known and rather frequently addressed as "Madame Bonaparte."

“BARNEY, Joshua,

Born 1759.

Died, 1818.

A brilliant American naval officer who served in the War of Independence and captured the GENERAL MONK, and in 1812 bore a distinguished part in the battle of Bladensburg.”

vide Cassell’s “New Biographical Dictionary,” 1892, page 101.

“BARNEY, Joshua, a distinguished Naval Commander in the service of the United States, was born at Baltimore, in 1759. When a boy he made several voyages to Europe; and in 1776, when not seventeen, he was presented with a lieutenant’s commission on account of his bravery. During the struggle for American Independence, BARNEY took several vessels, and performed numerous acts of gallantry; was taken and retaken; taken again and sent to Plymouth, from which place he made his escape; was again retaken, but finally escaped, and arrived in Philadelphia in 1782. He immediately entered on active duty, and continued a successful career till the end of the war. In 1795 he received the commission of captain in the French service, and commanded a French squadron, but resigned his command in 1800, and returned to America. In 1813 he was appointed to command the flotilla for defence of the Chesapeake. During the summer of 1814 he kept up an active warfare with the British; but having landed most of his men, and joined the army when they entered Patuxent, he was wounded and made prisoner.

Died at Pittsburg 1818."

Vide Maunder's "New Universal Biography," 1847, page 76.

"BARNEY, Joshua, a distinguished American Seaman, who was born at Baltimore on the 6th. of July 1759. He went to sea whilst quite a youth, and at the beginning of the Revolutionary War, entered an American sloop in the capacity of master's mate. He accompanied the squadron of Commodore Hopkins, by which, in 1775, the capture of New Providence was effected. His gallantry obtained for him the rank of lieutenant, and he was taken prisoner by the English, but soon exchanged. In October, 1779, he together with a friend, captured a considerable prize, and in the next year married. In a few weeks after this, he was robbed of all his money in going to Baltimore, and without mentioning his loss, he soon went again to sea, where he was taken prisoner, carried to England, and confined at Plymouth, from whence however, he escaped, and returning to Pennsylvania, received the command of a small ship with which he captured the GENERAL MONK, belonging to the English Fleet.

In the latter end of the year, he was employed to carry despatches to Dr. Franklin, at Paris, and to bring back a quantity of bullion lent by the French king to the United States. In 1796 he went again to France with Mr. Munroe, deputed the bearer of the national flag to the Convention, and held for a short time a naval command under the French Government. He resigned it in 1800, and returned to America, and in 1813 was appointed to the command of the flotilla assembled to protect the CHESAPEAKE. He was present at the engagement of Bladensburg, on the 24th of August, 1814, and was wounded. In May, 1815, he went on a mission to Europe, and returned in October following. After this he lived in retirement, and died on the 1st of December 1818, at Pittsburg, on his way to Kentucky, where he had intended to settle. He served his country for forty-one years, and was engaged, says Dr. Allen, in twenty-six battles and one duel.—Vide Rose's "New General Biographical Dictionary," 1848, p. 202.
